

ABSTRACT

A method for increasing free glutamic acid content in meat of poultry or livestock, thereby improving the taste of the meat, and the feed used therefor are disclosed. In the method of the present invention, a feed having a low leucine
5 content is given to the poultry or livestock.